JUDICIAL COOPERATION AMONG THE ECO MEMBER STATES

The Economic Cooperation Organization (ECO) prioritizes judicial and anti-corruption cooperation among its Member States, in line with its programmatic document ECO Vision 2025, where the goals and objectives of promoting regional stability, development and sustainable growth are reflected.

As the Economic Cooperation Organization (ECO) celebrates its 40th anniversary, the importance of constructive judicial cooperation among its ten Member States is gaining importance year by year.

The ECO region features diverse legal systems, presenting challenges and opportunities for economic integration and trade.

This edition highlights ECO Member States' efforts to enhance judicial cooperation and develop common frameworks to deal with contemporary security challenges such as transnational crimes like drug trafficking, money laundering, cybercrime and others.

Judicial interaction in the ECO area has several tracks: cooperation among the Offices of the Attorneys/ Prosecutors General, Interior Ministries, anti-narcotics agencies and others.

Owing to the joint efforts among the law-enforcements agencies of the ECO Member States judicial cooperation has taken a certain shape and framework. For example, the Charter of the ECO Regional Center for Cooperation of Anti-corruption Agencies and Ombudsmen (RCCACO) came into force and now a work is ongoing on the establishment of its future Secretariat. The Plan of Interaction among the Offices of the Attorneys/ Prosecutors General of the ECO Member States^{5th Meeting of Attorneys/Prosecutors General}, which was adopted in Dushanbe on 16 May 2024 is an important document that leads to an increase of technical interaction in the field of judicial cooperation.

The meetings of the Attorneys/Prosecutors General of the ECO Member States have greatly contributed to the advancement of the goals and objectives reflected in the ECO Vision 2025. Up till now the Attorneys/Prosecutors General of the ECO Member States have met five times since 2012. The upcoming 6th Meeting scheduled in Tashkent on September 25-26, 2025 is anticipated to discuss
